

JAMES M. DOYLE, M.D., P.C. JOINS ALLIED PHYSICIANS GROUP

Specialist In Pediatric Ophthalmology Expands Practice

(Melville, NY) – December 2014 – Allied Physicians Group announced today that pediatric ophthalmologists Dr. James M. Doyle and Tehara C. Bailey of Rockville Centre, NY have joined its family of doctors.

"Our continued growth and forging of alliances within New York State proves that Allied's mission of being in business for yourself, but not by yourself, is resonating with doctors," stated Director of Business Development for Allied Physicians Group Robert Creaven.

Doyle agrees, "I had been a specialist in solo practice for just shy of 20 years and in August chose to expand. I hired Dr. Bailey to join me since she is compassionate, great with children, is a product of Long Island schools, and most importantly, she specializes in my specialty- strabismus. By aligning my practice with Allied, we can focus on what we do best and they will take care of the administrative aspects of the business."

"We formed Allied so that all are 'equal share partners' and owners of an independent medical group, receiving vital support in matters such as NCQA/PCMH certification, accounting and financial services, analytical reporting, malpractice assistance and human resources management, to name just a few, " said CEO of Allied Physicians Group Dr. Gary Mirkin. "Allied helps take care of the business so that we all can focus on providing the best patient care."
